Ms Renate Simpson	2010

I was delighted to take over as Chair of the Society in June 2012, having served as Chair of the Society's Research & Development Committee and as Convenor of the FE/HE (now Post-Compulsory Education) Network for a number of years, as well as being a long-standing member and active supporter of the Society and its mission.

At this time of great change within the sector, the Society's commitment to developing higher education research capacity by encouraging those new to this field is more important than ever in ensuring growth and vitality within a rapidly changing landscape. I am proud to be associated with these endeavours, and hope to help drive them forward over the coming years.

Ensuring that researchers continue to have the opportunity to disseminate their research through the Society's publications and Network events remains critical. Whilst many of the ongoing changes in relation to Open Access Publishing are to be applauded, my fear is that there may be unintended consequences such as a reduction in opportunities for less established authors to publish and disseminate their work. I am deeply committed to the Society's efforts in ensuring that such opportunities continue to be provided: innovative and experimental research work must be allowed to flourish.

The road ahead for all Learned Societies will no doubt have many twists and turns, but by drawing on the contribution of all its members, I feel confident that the Society is in a strong position from which to adapt, grow, and continue to provide the cross-institutional space that is so important to the development of higher education research. We must continue to provide examples and evidence of the contribution that the Society makes to ensure this is more widely recognised by the public and policy-makers alike.

In my role as Chair of the Society I would like to thank the SRHE office staff and Director for continuing to move the Society forward, both operationally and in terms of its vision and scope. I would like to thank all my colleagues who are members of Council and the Society's committees for their commitment and hard work over the past year. Three Council members are standing down this calendar year: Professor Joelle Fanghanel, Professor Malcolm Tight as well as my predecessor as Chair of the Governing Council, Professor Yvonne Hillier. I thank them all for their contributions to the work of Council and their support for the Society.

We warmly welcomed six new members to the Governing Council in 2012, Dr Paul Ashwin, Professor Penny-Jane Burke, Dr Helen Carasso, Dr David Hay, Professor Ian Kinchin, and Dr Jacqueline Stevenson, who bring a wealth of knowledge and experience which will stand the Society in good stead over the coming years.

Looking ahead, I am looking forward to working closely with my fellow trustees, the SRHE team, and all members and friends of the Society to help ensure that the SRHE remains influential and proactive, and hope that we will be able to provide current and future members with the type and range of services that can make a positive difference to their work and professional development.

PROFESSOR JILL JAMESON
CHAIR

“ We have a powerful and highly respected international team now responsible for the Society’s flagship journal and a new Editorial Board of 25 leading international scholars responsible for 8 issues of the journal and two special issues annually. ”

Financial year July 2011 – July 2012:
Reporting year January 2012 – December 2012

Following the move to new SRHE office premises in October 2011, we ran another very successful set of Annual Conferences in December 2011, at which we launched our new website, offering many new benefits for Society members and a greatly improved resource centre for information on higher education research. We therefore started 2012 on a sound financial basis and with a solid foundation for moving the Society forward and delivering more and better targeted services for our members.

One of our first projects was to embark on an effectiveness review of the way in which the Society is organised. Such reviews are recommended good management practice and although the Society has a well-established process for self review this was the first time in which we have embarked on a formal exercise of this nature. We looked particularly at the structure of the Society Committees, how representative they are, and how well they are seen to operate and serve the needs of the Society and of the membership. The outcome has been a refocusing of Committee agendas to ensure that issues of strategic importance are not buried in the weighty tasks of managing some of the large projects which run each year, such as the Society's Annual Research Awards, our Annual Conferences and our publications arm. As a consequence, each of the Committees now has a specific strategic focus for each meeting, a clearer sense of purpose and direction and there is a renewed sense of vigour and engagement, especially on issues of policy and areas where the Society can quickly make a valuable contribution to higher education research.

One example of the ability to be "fleet of foot" was the decision to develop and run a series of Professional Development Workshops for newer researchers. We now have a solid PD programme of ten workshops, all of which run at capacity and up to three times a year. The feedback from participants has been excellent. One particular success factor has been the opportunity these workshops offer for newer researchers to meet with others in higher education research, facing similar issues. At the institutional level we found that few higher education researchers have this opportunity as they often miss out on the chance to attend a programme which may only run once a year due to teaching, field work or similar commitments.

In common with most Learned Societies the publications arm is of huge importance to the SRHE, both in terms of providing the income to fund Society activity and in terms of the reputation and profile of the Society and this past year has been one of considerable activity on the publications front.

In January 2012, a new editorial team took over in charge of Studies in Higher Education. We have a powerful and highly respected international team now responsible for the Society's flagship journal and a new Editorial Board of 25 leading international scholars responsible for 8 issues of the journal and two special issues annually. In March 2012 we were also pleased to welcome new editors for Research into Higher Education Abstracts based at Leiden University, Dr. Gerda Visser-Vijnveen and Dr. Roeland Van der Rijst. Working with such a team of international editors is proving stimulating and contributing significantly to the Society's international profile and impact. With a new publisher also for the SRHE/Routledge Book series, Bruce Roberts at Routledge, and a highly experienced editorial team for Higher Educational Quarterly, Professor Lee Harvey and Dr. Celia Whitchurch, all the Society's publications are in expert hands and performing very well.

This editorial strength is particularly important given the implementation of an Open Access policy in the UK as the implications for Society publishing are huge. Despite two Select Committee inquiries and separate consultations with RCUK and HEFCE, not to mention reams of articles and submissions, there has been little, if any, change in UK Government policy. Learned Societies, especially in the Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences, now face a considerable set of challenges in adapting to a very different publishing landscape whilst trying to maintain the level and quality of their activities and support for their research communities.

We ended 2012 with a most successful Annual Conference, What is Higher Education for? Shared and contested ambitions, and equally successful associated Newer Researchers Conference as detailed later in this report on page 11.

Our focus for 2012-13 will be on our membership both in terms of the services we offer and how these might be developed. Building a larger and more secure membership base internationally will be a particular priority. In the light of pressures on Open Access the Society has to look to both secure this income stream and to seek out other income generating activities or partnerships.

I would like to end with some important 'thankyous' and some farewells. A warm and heartfelt thank you to the SRHE Office team; Rob Gresham, Franco Carta, Nicola Manches and Francois Smit who keep a very busy ship afloat on many fronts, but also especially deliver the Society's rich programme of network events, workshops, conferences and Committee meetings, week by week.

A farewell to our outgoing Chair Professor Yvonne Hillier, with our grateful thanks for taking on the role of Chair during a period of transition. To our outgoing President Professor Sir David Watson, whom it has been an honour and pleasure to know and work with over a great many years, both before SRHE and especially in this capacity, we say a fond farewell, with most grateful thanks for 8 years of support, guidance, wise counsel and great cartoons. We also say farewell with huge and grateful thanks to Professor Ian McNay as a superb and hard-working Editor of Research into Higher Education Abstracts after twelve years in this post, but not, we hope, to Ian as a continuing member and contributor, whom nothing gets past and will by now be editing these words and groaning yet again over the grammatical errors.

HELEN PERKINS
DIRECTOR

2011-12 saw a number of new developments in terms of the management of the Society membership. On-line Membership went fully live in March 2012, following on (and linked to) the launch of the new SRHE website in December 2011.

Members can now manage their own membership in the following ways:

- Update their contact details and passwords
- Add subscriptions to publications such as the Studies in HE and HEQ journals
- Book places at forthcoming SRHE events (& viewing events attended)
- Make all payments for membership and events directly on-line
- Add their own research interests as a member
- Search other members research interests

Members can also now:

- Access SRHE News (Current issue and all previous issues)
- Receive Book discounts with Routledge (30%) and Wiley (20%)
- Gain on-line access through Taylor and Francis to the following journals:
Research into Higher Education Abstracts, Teaching in Higher Education, Assessment & Evaluation in Higher Education, European Journal of Higher Education, Innovations in Education and Teaching International, Journal of Marketing for Higher Education, Perspectives: Policy and Practice in Higher Education, Quality in Higher Education

Membership renewal reminders are now provided in the form of three automatic e-mail reminders (28 days before, 14 days before and on expiry). This has helped reduce the administrative costs and time involved in posting out reminders and invoices etc.

Membership levels (at 1st November 2012)

Membership Category	Active Members*
Individual	363
Retired (inc. lifetime)	60
Student	164
TOTAL	587

*These figures do not include 668 'guest memberships', which are generated when a non-member signs up for an SRHE event, a membership has recently expired, or when payment for membership is still pending.

Current membership proportions by type are as follows: Individual 68%, Student 24%, Retired 8%.

UK members currently account for 75% of all membership. The 25% Non-UK members are drawn from over 25 countries, with Australia, Ireland the US, and South Africa having the largest representations.

Membership rates

After a careful review of membership rates in 2011-12, the Governing Council agreed to the following rates for SRHE membership in 2012-13, which became applicable from 1st August 2012:

Individual:	£100	no change
Student:	£35	£5 increase
Retired:	£45	£5 increase
Lifetime retired:	£300	£50 increase

In the current climate, growing the membership numbers without incurring extensive marketing costs remains a constant challenge. Further suggestions from existing members in terms of marketing, gaining new members and the membership offer remain very welcome, and can be emailed to rgresham@srhe.ac.uk

What is Higher Education For?

Shared and contested ambitions

SRHE Annual Conference

12-14 December 2012, Celtic Manor, Newport, South Wales, UK

With 330 delegates in attendance from over 27 countries, this proved to be a very vibrant and successful SRHE conference.

Main speakers were as follows:

Professor Howard Hotson, Fellow and Tutor in Modern History, Professor of Early Modern Intellectual History, St Anne's College University of Oxford

Professor Suellen Shay, Associate Professor and Deputy Dean in the Centre for Higher Education Development (CHED) at the University of Cape Town, South Africa

Professor Georg Krücken, Director of the International Centre for Higher Education Research Kassel and Professor of Sociology and Higher Education Research at the University of Kassel.

With further keynotes from Professor Sir David Watson, SRHE President and Principal of Green Templeton College and Professor of Higher Education at the University of Oxford plus a Vice-Presidential address from Professor Roger Brown, Co-Director for the Centre of Higher Education Research Development (CHERD) at Liverpool Hope University.

The Society forged a number of new relationships, with the Campaign for the Defence of British Universities, with the new team at INCHER in Kassel, Germany, and brought together the new editorial teams for all the Society journals. For the first time we were able to showcase the first books published in the SRHE book series and present the 2012 Research and Scoping Awards

The Conference concluded with a series of parallel research-led discussion seminars exploring the key issues in higher education research and providing a forum for delegate input and discussion, sharing research knowledge and ideas.

Seminars considered questions such as:

What alternative metaphors are there for "student as consumer" and "student as customer"?

Do MOOCs (massive, open, online courses) offer a truly radical alternative to formal education?

In what ways (if at all) are Widening Participation, Equality & Diversity and Social Mobility theoretically, politically and ideologically different?

In addition, the Newer Researchers conference was held on 11 December 2012 and featured a keynote address from Professor Roni Bamber, Director of Centre for Academic Practice, Queen Margaret University, Edinburgh on Tribal Identities and Tribal Reservations.

With over 90 delegates from over 15 different countries, this conference provided a valuable opportunity for postgraduates and newer researchers to share and discuss their work with peers in the Higher Education research community in a supportive and developmental environment.

The organising committee of Dr Mark Kerrigan, Dr Sian Lindsay, and Dr Saranne Weller were once again key to the success of this event, and the many posters produced by the delegates in attendance added a visual, thought-provoking conclusion to the day.

RESEARCH AWARDS 2012

Following on from the success of the first year of the SRHE Awards in 2011, the 2012 Awards were launched in July 2012.

Later in 2012, the Society made:

- Four Member-only awards of £10,000 each for research focused on any aspect of higher education
- Two Scoping awards of £5,000 each for the exploration of any new or emerging area of higher education research leading to the development of a plan for further research. Scoping awards were open to all and applications were received from members and non-members of the Society.

The Society is pleased to record the awards made in 2012 were as follows:

Research Awards: 4 awards of £10,000 each

Dr Heike Behle, University of Warwick

The transferability of (under-)graduate knowledge gained in UK higher education institutions (HEIs) within the European Higher Education Area

Professor Linda Evans with Dr Matthew Homer, University of Leeds

Academic journal editors' professionalism: perceptions of power, proficiency and personal agendas

Dr Anna Jones & Professor David Smith, Glasgow Caledonian University

Leading university teaching: exploring the uses of higher education research

Dr Janice Malcolm (University of Kent) with Professor Miriam Zukas (Birkbeck, University of London)

Discipline and workplace learning in practice: an exploratory study of academic work

Scoping Awards: 2 awards of £5,000 each

Dr David Lewis, University of Leeds

Enhancing employability and building bridges: Evaluation of public engagement opportunities within undergraduate STEM curricula

Dr Saranne Weller & Dr Camille Kandiko, King's College, London

Students as co-developers of learning and teaching: Redefining expertise and student voice through student participation in professional development

The reports from the 2011 awards are available from the Society's website at www.srhe.ac.uk by clicking on 'What's new in the Society?'

13

DR. MICHAEL KEENAN from Nottingham Trent University was awarded the 2012 prize for his proposal entitled:

Coming out and fitting in: A qualitative exploration of lesbian, gay, homosexual, bisexual, trans and queer students' university experiences.

Michael joined Nottingham Trent University as a lecturer in Sociology in 2007 following the completion of his PhD which explored the identity negotiations of gay men in the Church of England clergy. Since joining NTU Michael has taught on a variety of modules, and supervised students at undergraduate and postgraduate levels. His research is broadly focused on issues of religious and/or sexual identity.

From 2009 to 2011 Michael was co-investigator on the AHRC/ESRC funded large grant study 'Religion, Youth and Sexuality: A Multi-faith Exploration' which explored the lives and experiences of religious young adults from a variety of faith background, with a specific focus on issues of sexuality. The RYS study completed in February 2011.

Michael is also currently developing a research project exploring the experiences and identities of Muslim police officers. The 'Coming out and fitting in' project builds on Michael's experiences, while also allowing for the developing of these with a specific focus on higher education. The project allows for reflection on contemporary experiences of higher education, which it is hoped will be of interest to higher education institutions, current students and policy makers.

DR. ANNA ZIMDARS from King's College London was awarded the 2012 Prize for her proposal entitled:

Converging pathways? Revisiting Turner's mobility modes for the case of undergraduate admission in the UK and the U.S.

Anna joined King's Learning Institute at King's College London as a lecturer in Higher Education in 2011. Anna joined King's College after a post-doctoral position at Manchester University, a DPhil award from Oxford and her undergraduate studies at the University of Kent. Anna's research interest is in access to university and access to professions. Her work has previously been largely quantitative, meaning that she has used data sets to investigate various questions such as: how do individuals with different social background characteristics fare in the competition for scarce goods - such as highly selective education or highly selective professional entry? Anna then draws social theory to understand the empirical research findings. The SRHE funded project will allow Anna to explore the use of qualitative methods in understanding at a deeper – and hopefully more philosophical level – questions of university access and admission.

Anna's work has been covered in the national media including Radio 4, The Sunday Times and the Guardian and referred to in Parliament. She has served as an invited expert to the Alan Milburn Commission on Social Mobility and organised a conference on access to selective universities.

Studies in Higher Education

This journal has a wide ranging interest in higher education and the social and institutional contexts within which it takes place, but gives particular emphasis to education as practice, with a view to influencing its development.

Published by: Routledge Taylor & Francis Group
Frequency: Eight issues per year plus two special issues in 2013 and 2014
Print ISSN: 0307-5079
Online ISSN: 1470-174X

Editor: Professor V. Lynn Meek, University of Melbourne, Australia
Special Issues Editors: Dr Mary- Louise Kearney, OECD, France & Dr Dan Lincoln, Boston College, USA
Associate Editor: Professor John Richardson, Open University, UK.

Higher Education Quarterly

Higher Education Quarterly publishes articles concerned with policy, strategic management and ideas in higher education. A substantial part of its contents is concerned with reporting research findings in ways that bring out their relevance to senior managers and policy makers at institutional and national levels, and to academics who are not necessarily specialists in the academic study of higher education.

Higher Education Quarterly also publishes papers that are not based on empirical research but give thoughtful academic analyses of significant policy, management or academic issues.

Published by: Wiley Blackwell Publishing
Frequency: Four issues per year
Print ISSN: 0951-5224
Online ISSN: 1468-2273

Joint Editor: Professor Lee Harvey
 Lee is an acknowledged expert on issues of quality, employability and student feedback in higher education. Previously, Lee was the Director of the Centre for Research & Evaluation at Sheffield Hallam University, and Director of Research at the Higher Education Academy.

Joint Editor: Dr Celia Whitchurch
 Celia is Lecturer in Higher Education at the Institute of Higher Education, University of London. Celia has published widely on institutional management and changing professional identities in higher education.

Research into Higher Education Abstracts

This aims for complete coverage of current UK work and selective overseas coverage.

SRHE/Routledge Book series

The first book in the SRHE series was published in February 2012, Intellectual Leadership in Higher Education by Bruce Macfarlane from the University of Hong Kong. This was followed in June 2012 by Strategic Curriculum Change by Paul Blackmore and Camille B Kandiko from the Kings' Learning Institute, King's College, London.

Further books were published as follows:

Reconstructing Identities in Higher Education: The rise of 'Third Space' professionals, by Celia Whitchurch

The University in Dissent: Scholarship in the corporate university, by Gary Rolfe

Everything for Sale? The Marketisation of UK Higher Education, by Roger Brown, Helen Carasso

The Society continues to invite book proposals for inclusion in the series and welcomes submissions from single authors, co-authors and edited collections.

The Society's turnover remains impressive at £637k (against £630k in 2010/11 and £570k in 2009/10). The Society's publications, in particular Studies in Higher Education continue to make a significant contribution to the income and reputation of the Society, with a total of £293k received from periodicals and royalties.

We have managed to transfer £60k to reserves (now at 707k), of which £225k is our semi-permanent contingency fund, leaving potentially £482k as an expendable reserve for special projects over the next few years. This transfer to reserves is lower this year compared to the £150k transferred last year given the office relocation costs of c. £75k.

Expenditure has increased to £642k (compared with £488k last year), given the increased office rent and running costs and further cost increases remain sustainable given the security of the Society's key source of income from Studies in Higher Education. This journal income looks relatively stable to December 2014 given the contractual arrangements in place.

The Society remains comfortably placed to deal not only with ever increasing costs (such as the rent on office premises), but also has financial capacity for embarking on new activities to the extent of up to say £100-£125k per annum over some years. Clearly, this 'additional activity' spending will need to be reviewed when the process for the re-tendering of Studies has been completed, since such a process could lead to the Society earning less from Studies than it currently does.

The thanks of the Treasurer need, as ever, to be recorded to the SRHE Team and the Director Helen Perkins, for the thoughtful and responsible management of the Society's income and expenditure.

Finally, I am pleased to confirm that the SRHE is fully compliant with all requirements stipulated by the Charity Commission, and is thus in possession of a 'clean bill of health' in financial terms for 2011-12.

The Society for Research into Higher Education (SRHE) is an independent and financially self-supporting international learned Society.

It is concerned to advance understanding of higher education, especially through the insights, perspectives and knowledge offered by systematic research and scholarship.

The Society's primary role is to improve the quality of higher education through facilitating knowledge exchange, discourse and publication of research. SRHE members are worldwide and the Society is an NGO in operational relations with UNESCO.

The Society has a wide set of aims and objectives. Amongst its many activities the Society:

- is a specialist publisher of higher education research, journals and books, amongst them Studies in Higher Education, Higher Education Quarterly, Research into Higher Education Abstracts and a long running monograph book series.
- funds and supports a large number of special interest networks for researchers and practitioners working in higher education from every discipline. These networks are open to all and offer a range of topical seminars, workshops and other events throughout the year ensuring the Society is in touch with all current research knowledge.

- runs the largest annual UK-based higher education research conference and parallel conference for postgraduate and newer researchers. This is attended by researchers from over 35 countries and showcases current research across every aspect of higher education.

SRHE membership benefits include:

- Free attendance at SRHE network events
- Reduced rate journal subscriptions and books from a range of publisher catalogues
- Discounted rates for the SRHE conference
- Free subscription to Research into Higher Education Abstracts & SRHE News
- The opportunity to apply for annual member research grants
- On-line access to a number of Higher Education journals.
